

Subscribe now to
Your Daily Phil

Subscribe

Scroll down to see Amy Neustein's article, encircled by a red border

RECENT ISSUES

- Select -

Your Daily Phil

April 16, 2024

Around the Web

Yale University's Joseph Slifka Center for Jewish Life hosted the first Jewish Women's conference in over 25 years...

Bloomberg visits the Streit's factory in Orangeburg, N.Y., the country's only still-operating mechanical matzah factory, as the company prepares for Passover, which begins next week...

Craig and Barbara Weiner made an unspecified "significant gift" to Florida Atlantic University to establish the Holocaust Museum of South Florida at FAU, which will be named for them. The donation will go to the construction of a 2,000-square-foot museum within the university's Holocaust and Jewish Studies Building, beginning this summer...

The Chronicle of Philanthropy looks at how nonprofits are grappling with intra-office tensions over the Israel-Hamas war...

The Israeli delegation to the Venice Biennale art exhibition locked the doors to its pavilion, saying no one could enter until a deal has been reached to bring home the hostages in Gaza and end the war...

Town & Country magazine interviews Alexandra Cohen, who serves as president of the Steven & Alexandra Cohen Foundation, which recently donated $116 million to New York's LaGuardia Community College...

In Newsweek, sociologist Amy Neustein reflects on her great-grandfather's murder a century ago in what was believed to be an antisemitic attack as she confronts modern-day antisemitism in the wake of the Oct. 7 attacks...

Ken Holtzman, MLB's winningest Jewish pitcher who played for the Oakland A's and Chicago Cubs, died on Sunday at 78...